Rachel advises owners, operators, and asset managers across a variety of industries on every facet of sophisticated commercial real estate transactions. Her practice spans the full property life cycle—guiding clients from initial acquisition and financing, through development and operation, to ultimate disposition—always with an emphasis on efficiency, risk mitigation, and value creation. Rachel also structures and negotiates complex joint ventures, representing both sponsor and capital partners in crafting agreements that align interests and advance strategic objectives.

Beyond real estate, Rachel routinely negotiates high-value sponsorship and licensing arrangements for leading companies in the sports and food sectors. Drawing on this breadth of experience, she delivers the comprehensive, business-focused counsel that clients rely on to move projects forward and achieve their commercial goals.
