Michelle works with CEOs and senior executives of established and emerging brands—with a particular presence in the media and entertainment, consumer products, beauty and wellness, fashion, and social media industries—to develop dynamic global brand and content strategies. Companies seek her counsel on multi-jurisdictional IP disputes and industry transformative technologies, including digital assets, GenAI, and Web3.

At the firm, Michelle co-leads the Media & Entertainment team, which advises some of the world's top movie studios, television producers and broadcasters, music services, and multimedia developers and publishers. She also co-leads the firm's AI & Web3 Task Force helping clients maintain, protect, and navigate IP rights and legal challenges arising from technological developments.

She has been repeatedly ranked and recognized nationally by numerous publications, including Chambers USA, Legal 500 US, World Trademark Review, Daily Journal, Los Angeles Business Journal, and other notable organizations for her work with IP owners to establish, expand, and optimize their brands, plan for content development, as well as enforce and protect their most valuable assets.

Client Work

Michelle develops strategic business solutions and global programs focusing on IP (including brands and copyrights), digital assets, content, technology, and privacy. She guides clients in navigating the legal terrain of IP and AI law and offers strategic insights and comprehensive guidance to protect clients' control and ownership of their works.

In addition to client counseling, Michelle negotiates licensing, distribution, manufacturing, and development agreements, guides the sale and acquisition of international IP rights, and structures internal policies to govern the creation and use of IP, social media activity, user-generated content, and personal data. She runs IP audits and builds and manages trademark and copyright portfolios. A substantial part of her practice is the protection of client IP rights with a robust and international policing and enforcement practice.

Michelle's work in the digital and online space includes counseling clients on digital assets and content, trade secrets, technology, and privacy and data. She develops policies and procedures on the use, development, and distribution of content and the collection, use, transfer, and protection of privacy and data. Michelle understands the IP and privacy challenges and benefits for companies operating on multimedia platforms and Web3 that result from GenAI.

Representative Matters
